

#141 The Fall of the Berlin Wall – The Moment in History of German Reunification on October 3, 1990, also represented a Healing of Charlemagne’s Split

On October 3, 1990, German Reunification took place. This encompassed the unification of West Germany and East Germany into a unified Germany.

Key Understanding: The 1990 reunification of a reunited Germany with France through NATO represented a complete healing of Charlemagne’s Split. The German Reunification of October 3, 1990, represented not only a unification of West Germany with East Germany, but also represented a reunification of a reunited Germany with France, for now all of Germany and France would be united together as part of the NATO alliance with the U.S.-led West. In essence, this was a Healing of Charlemagne’s Split.

Don’t Miss This: The United States had healed Charlemagne’s Split with Democracy.

In addition, #141–Doc 1 is a NATO presentation, including maps, in Macromedia Flash Player, showing the evolution of NATO in the years 1949, 1952, 1955, 1982, 1990, 1999, and 2004. After entering the site, click on the 1990 tab. Under the 1990 map showing a reunified Germany it says, “German Democratic Republic unifies with the Federal Republic of Germany. On 3 October 1990, the day of German unification, NATO marked the occasion by a special meeting, at which it welcomed the united country as a full member of the Alliance.”
