

#372 The Red Beast vs. The Scarlet Beast – The Role of Scarlett and Gone With The Wind, part 1, The South’s Scarlett Revolution against the Scarlet Beast

Gone With The Wind was an American novel by Margaret Mitchell. It was published in 1936 and won the Pulitzer Prize on May 3, 1937. The plot mostly revolves around Scarlett O’Hara, a rebellious Georgia woman.

The 1939 movie Gone With The Wind was adapted from the novel. The movie won 10 Academy Awards and as of 2006 was the highest grossing film in box-office history, adjusted for inflation. It is the best remembered and most publicized film in Hollywood’s flamboyant history, and quite probably the most beloved movie of all time. It has a significant place in prophecy. The story begins on the O’Hara’s large Southern cotton plantation, Tara, on the eve of the Civil War.

Key Understanding: Scarlet(t) revolutions. Consistent with the theme of the Great Red Dragon and revolution [reference Unsealing #360 and Revelation 12:7-9], Scarlett in Gone With the Wind represents the South (the Confederacy) in its Civil War rebellion – its Civil War revolution – against the North (the Union).

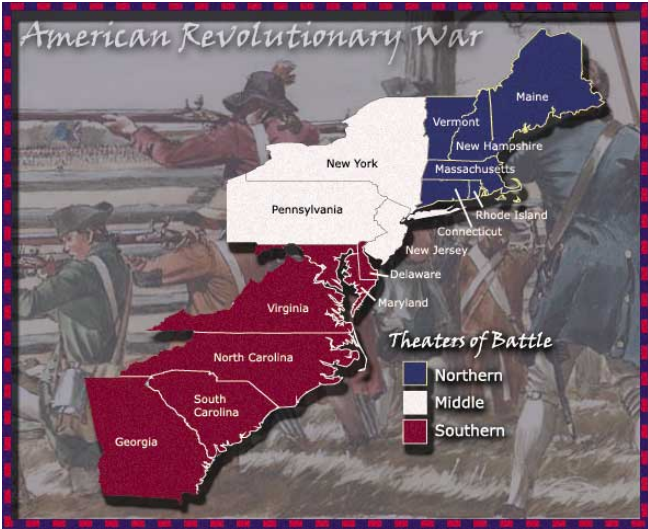

Vivien Leigh and Clark Gable

The Lord used Gone With The Wind to accurately characterize the South’s Civil War rebellion against the North as a Scarlet(t) Revolution, but we also have now seen that the Revolutionary War birth of America was the birth of the 8th Head Scarlet Beast out of the Pit.

Revelation 17:3 (KJV) So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness: and I saw a woman sit upon A SCARLET COLOURED BEAST, full of names of blasphemy, HAVING SEVEN HEADS and TEN HORNS.

Therefore, the Lord ordained (a) the Scarlet Revolutionary War of the colonists against Great Britain to birth the Revelation 17:3 Scarlet Beast, and subsequently ordained (b) the Scarlett Civil War revolution of the South against the North – the Union, which represented the hoped-for continuation of an undivided Scarlet Beast.
