

#483 The Genesis 19:24 Judgment on the USSR – The Recognition of the Soviet Union on February 1, 1924, 11 days after Lenin’s Death

On February 1, 1924, exactly 11 days after the January 21, 1924, death of V. I. Lenin, the British Labor government of Ramsay MacDonald announced that Great Britain would officially recognize the government of Soviet Russia. Mussolini’s Italian Fascist government conferred diplomatic recognition of Bolshevik Russia that same week, followed by Norway and Czechoslovakia. France then recognized the Soviet Union in October, with Japan’s recognition coming three months later, in January 1925. [The defeated Germans had already cemented diplomatic bonds of friendship with the Bolsheviks in 1922.] The United States, however, would remain adamantly opposed to diplomatically recognizing the Soviet Union for another ten years. Great Britain’s recognition of the Soviet Union on February 1, 1924, was a milestone in the relationship between the Soviet Union and other nations, and so much so that many historical sources chronicle that particular event in a form similar to “February 1, 1924 – recognition of the Soviet Union.”

Here is #483–Doc 1, the first portion of the Wikipedia article on the Soviet Union. Note that on the far right side it lists these four specific events:

Establishment, October Revolution
Declared, 30 December, 1922
Recognized, 1 February, 1924
Dissolved, 25 December, 1991

Key Understanding: The death of Lenin, its founder, and the recognition of the birth of the Soviet Union were occurring simultaneously. The Lord ordained that the January 21, 1924, death of V. I. Lenin be followed 11 days later [again, the 11-day date change is implemented] by the official recognition of the Soviet Union by Great Britain, on February 1, 1924. The recognition of the Soviet Union by Great Britain on February 1, 1924, came to represent recognition by the world of the Soviet Union. This solidified the status of the Soviet Union within the geo-political world community. The death of Lenin, its founder, and the recognition of the birth of the Soviet Union were occurring simultaneously. Clearly, the Lord ordained the Soviet Union to be tied to 1924.

The key verse for when we complete the understanding of why both the death of V. I. Lenin and the diplomatic recognition of the Soviet Union occurred in 1924 (exactly 11 days apart) is Genesis 19:24. Several Unsealings remain before the picture is complete on The Genesis 19:24 Judgment on the USSR.
