While the August 6, 1945, atomic bomb that was dropped on Hiroshima was nicknamed “Little Boy”, the Pu-239 atomic bomb that was dropped on Nagasaki on August 9, 1945, was nicknamed “Fat Man”, for, simply, it had a portly appearance.

Whether or not the Pu-239 August 9, 1945, Nagasaki ‘Fat Man’ atomic bomb was also named as such in reference to Winston Churchill would be debatable, but, nonetheless, many sources over the years have repeated the claim.

Key Understanding #1: *The Church-ill ‘fat man’ atomic bomb. Portly Winston Churchill is prophetically connected to the atomic bombs not only because of (i) his role as Britain’s wartime Prime Minister, (ii) his declaration of the atomic bomb being “the second coming in wrath,” (iii) his wartime government ending on July 26, 1945, the same day that the USS Indianapolis delivered the components of the (11-days later) August 6, 1945, atomic bomb to Tinian Island in the Pacific, but also because (iv), whether true or not, the Pu-239 August 9, 1945, Nagasaki ‘Fat Man’ atomic bomb is commonly believed to have partially derived its nickname from him.

Key Understanding #2: *Linking Churchill to the fat man A-bomb to point to the abomination of desolation of the Church-ill. The Lord specifically linked portly Churchill to the ‘Fat Man’ August 9, 1945, A-Bomb for the purpose of confirming its part in the Abomination of Desolation of and laying waste to the Church-ill Temple of God.
