In the three partitions of Poland – in 1772, 1793, and 1795 – Russia took from Poland what was essentially the land of Old Lithuania.

The detailed map below illustrates the growth of the Russian Empire. Note the acquisition of land by Russia through the three partitions of Poland in 1772, 1793, and 1795. This was primarily the Lithuanian part of the Polish-Lithuanian Empire. This is also the land that Russia would designate as the Pale of Settlement.
